Just when you think you've seen and heard all there is to Symphonic Pops, Jack Everly, Ty A. Johnson and Brandy Rodgers come up with yet another concept. With Mysterioso: a Performance of Illusion, Magic, Mirth and Music we went back in time to one of the original venues to experience an orchestra along with family entertainment. Performing at the junction of Hallowe'en may have spurred Maestro Everly to introduce the program as an illusion of Murder and Mayhem. The stage, festooned with vintage posters linking present with the past, set the tone for mystery. The live magic acts and illusionists were superb, the ISO players joined in the fun and no one actually got disembodied. Charles Richard Lester is minimalism's master, playing the theremin – an instrument one doesn't touch. And then there was David and Dania. How on earth do they do it? Do what? Astonish, amaze, astound with unforgettable, dazzling costume changes. And most amazing, to think we saw it at the symphony.
